“ If anyone taught me not to sweat the small stuff and to take life with a grain of salt and a smile it would have been you! Your contagious laugh and bad jokes will be missed beyond measure among so many others. Love you bunches, Uncle Big Mike, rest easy. ~Charlie

“ Mike was a man who lived by his own rules. He was a lover of animals, very blunt, often crass, and would always tell you like it was. You could “try” to tell him what to do, but he would then turn around and tell you where to “stuff it” (this of course is a cleaner version as to what he would actually say). He loved to make fun of others, even those who came hundreds of miles away, sometimes from CHICAGO, just to spend time with him, his lovely wife, and the rest of his “Happy Hour Crowd”. He didn’t care. He would go on, teasing and prodding, but as I, and everyone else knew, he often targeted those he loved. As much as he teased me, I KNEW he and Diana loved me “CHINGOS” (as my mom would say), and of course, I loved them back just as much, maybe more. Mike and Diana have always been there for my family and me, and I cannot thank them enough for their love and support throughout the years. Although I am sad that I could not tell him farewell, I know that it is only for a little while. I also know that while I may mourn, there’s a bushy, moustached angel in Heaven, drinking a beer, riding a motorcycle, and snickering that tell tale laugh, looking down at me, and saying, “Ronnie, get your sh*t together!”. I’ll miss you Mike, but I’ll always love you more. Hey, you and Diana are the only ones I ever let call me “Ronnie”, right? Right. That’s love, man.
